Serious about ANPR. Serious about service.™

NDI-RS training for the ANPR systems worldwide

NDI Recognition Systems (NDI-RS) believes that training is an essential part of overall product delivery not only to providing the capability to operate systems, but also in providing for the duty of care that follows from the operation of any equipment.

We believe in providing the best training available for ANPR systems worldwide, whether that be for an access control system gatehouse operator or the National Head of a Law Enforcement in the strategic implementation of major turnkey systems.

Following a training needs analysis, targeted training is based on how systems will be operated within the constraints of the customers own business processes.

We also recognise that in some circumstances training outside of normal locations and hours are needed, and in field covert training and night time training can be delivered where essential.

We are very capable to provide training for organisation 'trainers' so that information can cascade, to everyone and all are provided with access to training materials.

Bespoke training for non standard needs can also be provided.

Training Location

Most courses, except the Advanced Engineers, can be delivered on customers premises.

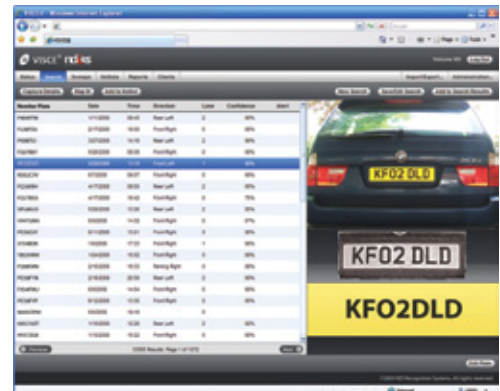

Camera Training

Where camera operation does not form part of the specific course, training can be arranged for those with specific requirements to adjust cameras at engineer level, though this should be restricted to high level users.
